Clarks

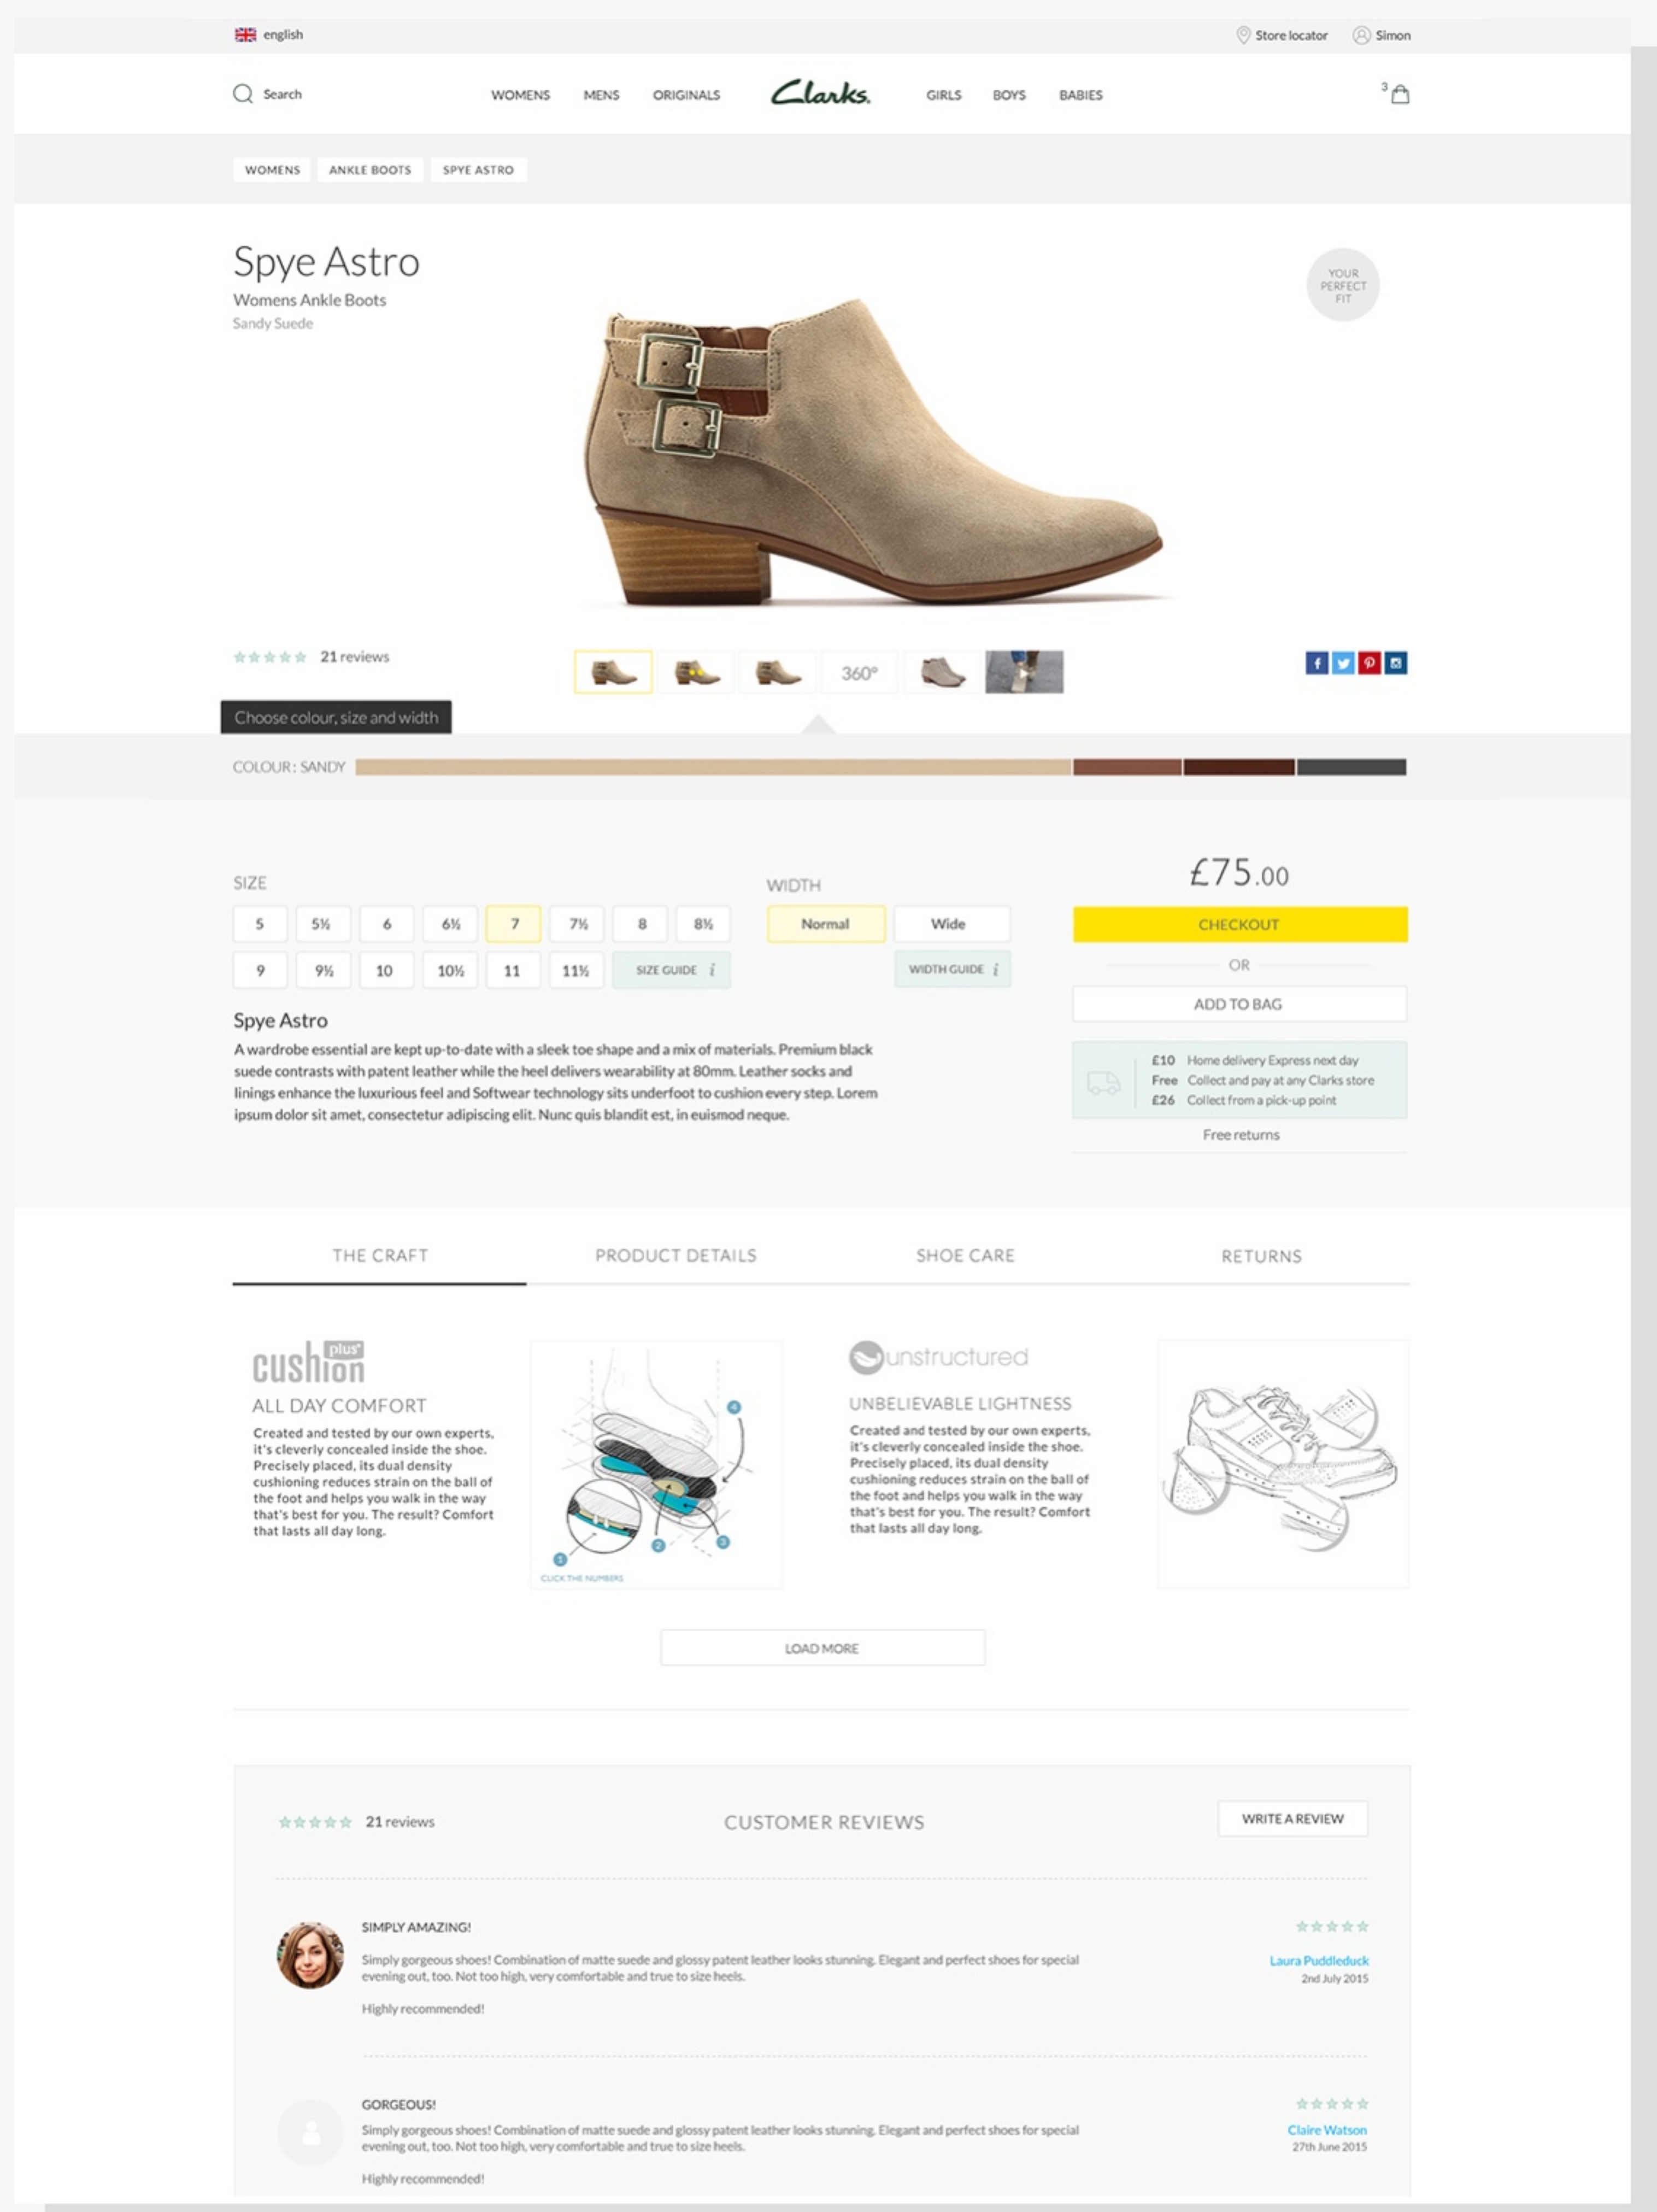

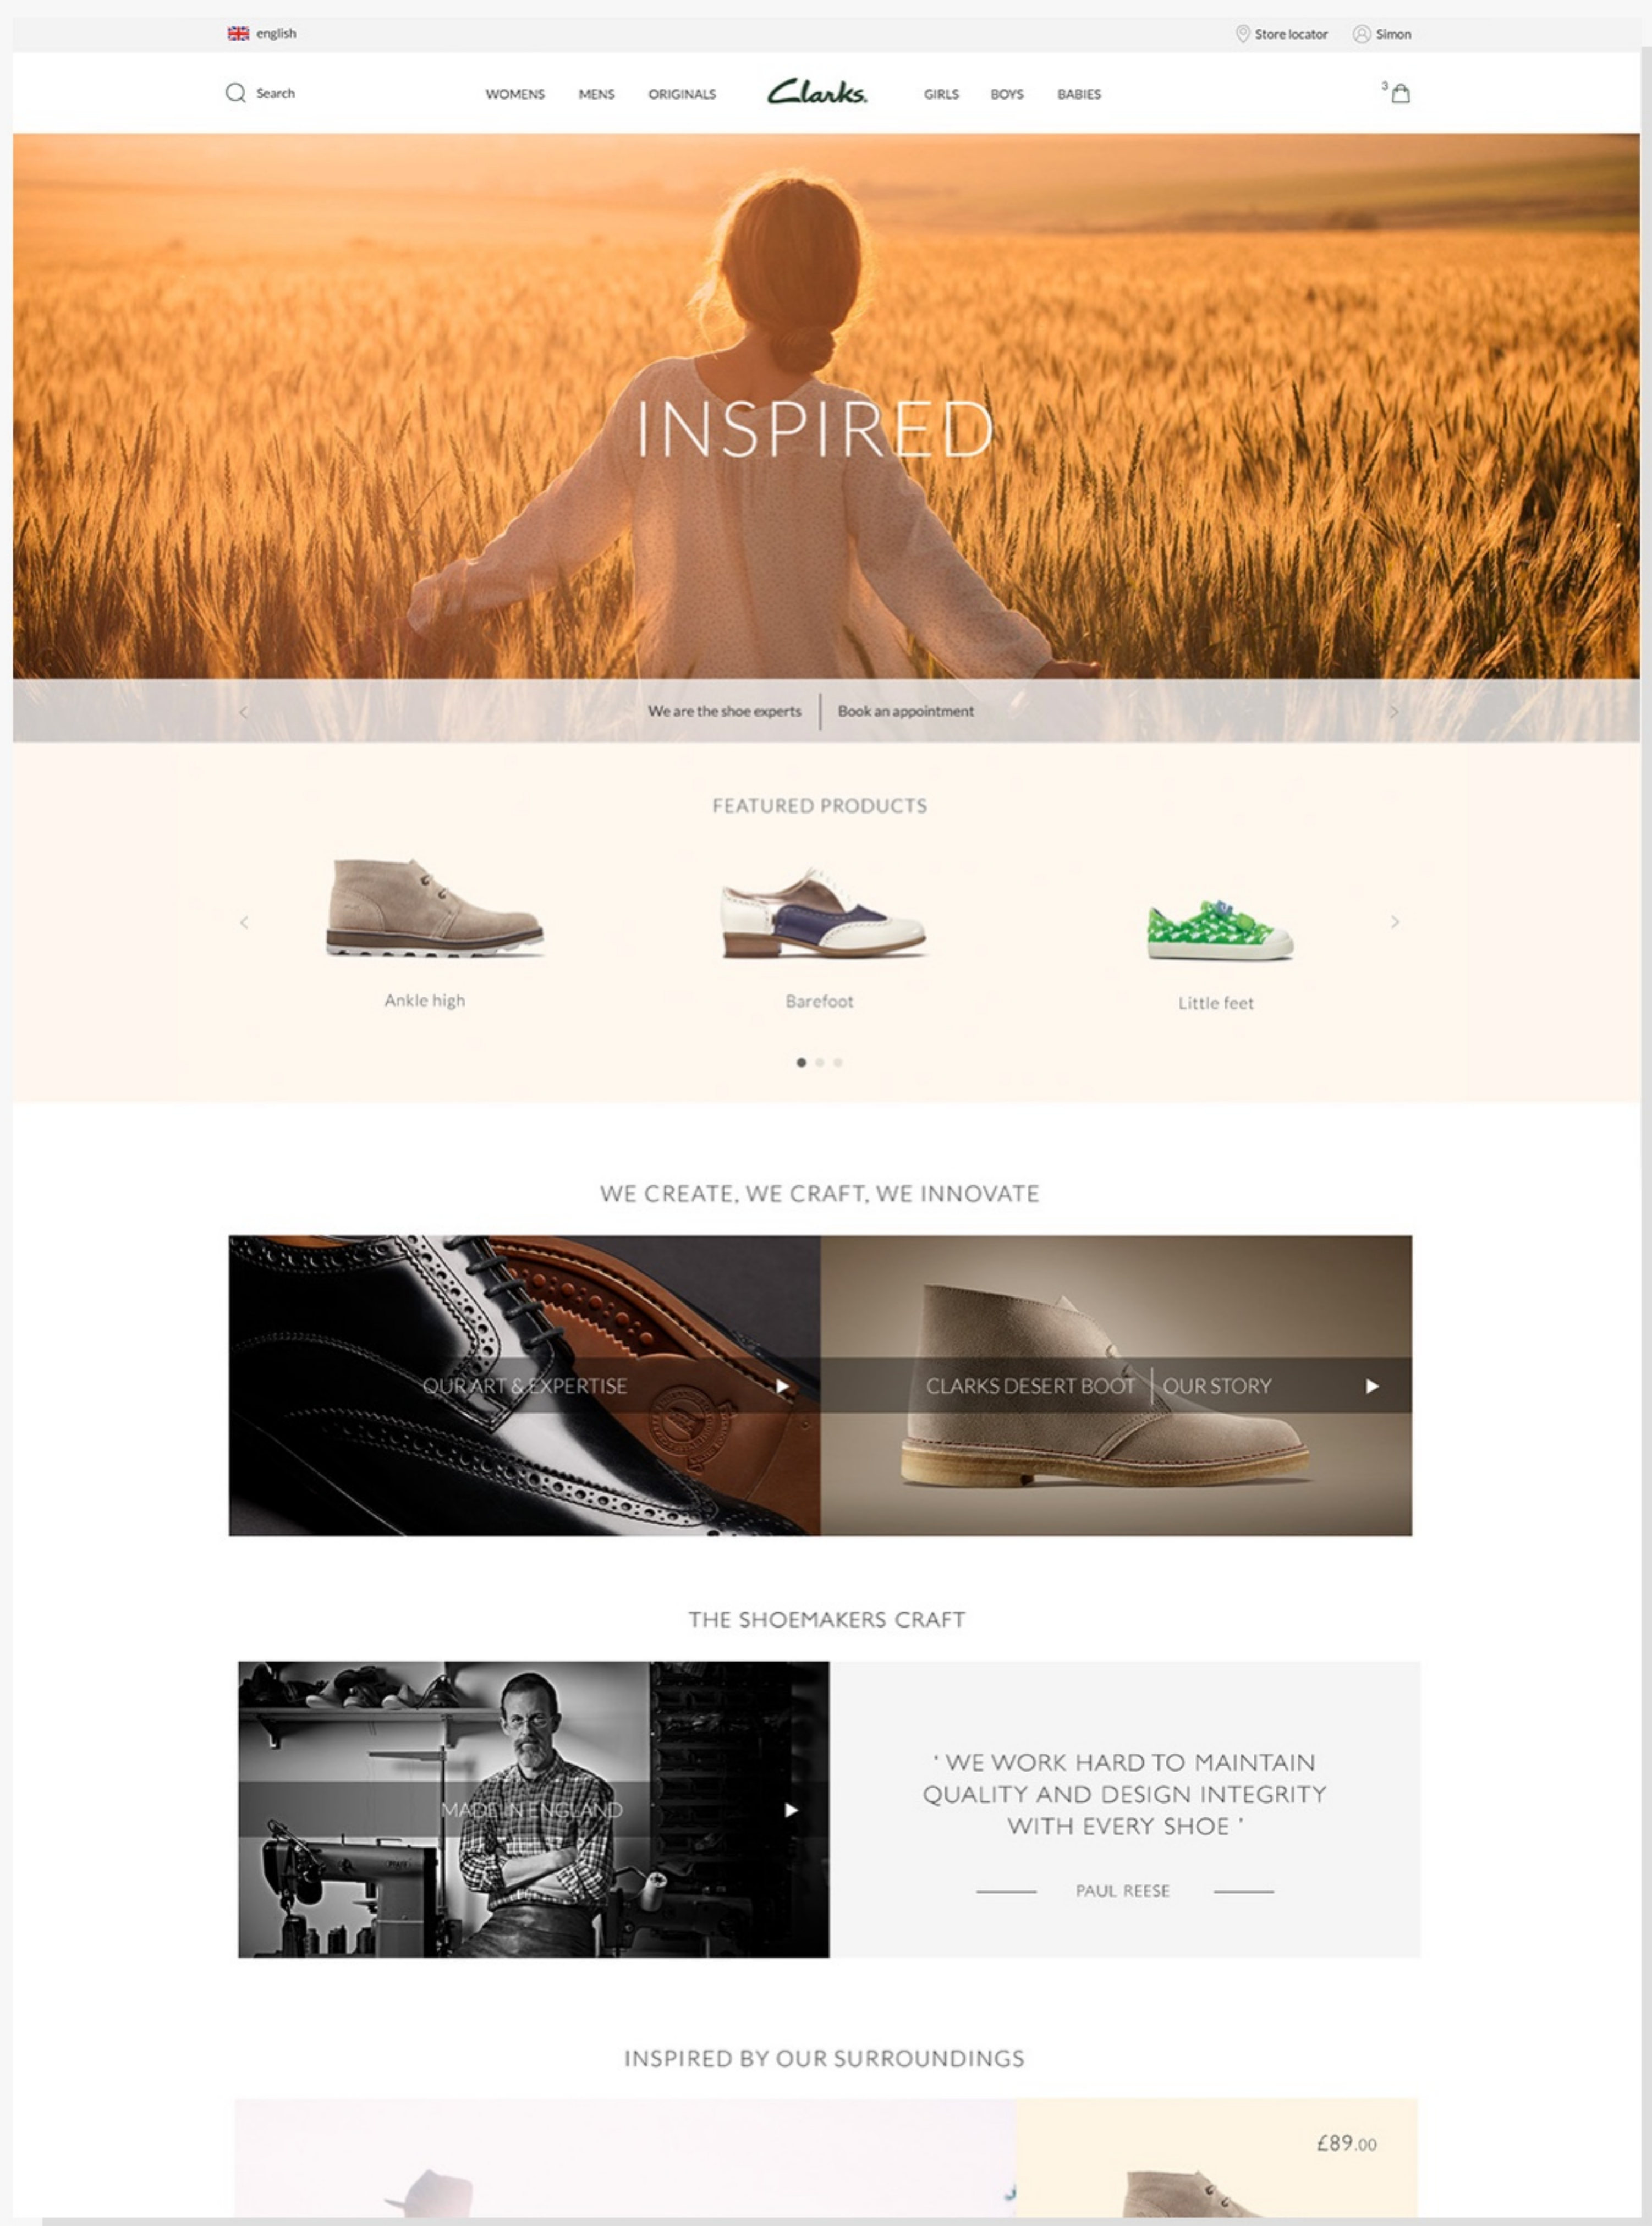

Clarks a well known shoe brand across the globe, still one of the most extensive and complex UX /

UI projects I've ever had the pleasure of working on. Overall, a very intensive experience, with multiple weekly client workshops to monitor progress and make sure all stakeholders were happy with the unfolding design process. At the time I was working with the service design company Fjord, who are big advocates of the Agile process. The entire project was built as a modular solution, which entailed designing and delivering a complex series of components for developers to then utilise and combine and construct various areas of the ecommerce product themselves.

Virgin Voyages

One of the largest projects I've ever worked on. Involving a large team of both UX and UI designers.

The the first Virgin cruise ship, The Scarlet Lady will travel from Miami, Florida to Havana, Cuba.

Directly marketed towards affluent young 20 - 30 somethings, with bars, night clubs and even a tattoo parlour onboard. There were 3 areas to the project. A website for agent bookers, the second for customers or sailors as they are described. The third a mobile app, to be used by sailors onboard the ship, enabling individuals to book tickets for events, food, classes, and wirelessly control aspects of the cabin. I was purely working on the user interface design side, mainly on the agent booking and customer front-end. A strong project example of large team collaboration with a contemporary playful branding.

EVERYTHING WE'VE GOT

OUR STORY

A voyage like no other

We're a rebel with a cause. Our mission is to change business for good - for people and our planet.

An epic sea change for all

We're on a mission to change the future of seafaring. It's crew who love coming to work, communities that benefit from a true partnership and sailors who leave transformed for the better.

Our kind of sailor

They're the curious sort, who want sunset beach parties and the sea breeze on their skin. Or maybe they crave a bit of luxe - from cotton socks to the perfect sailor's hat. Virgin Voyages sailors are here of a kind, because they're ours.

What makes Virgin Voyages different

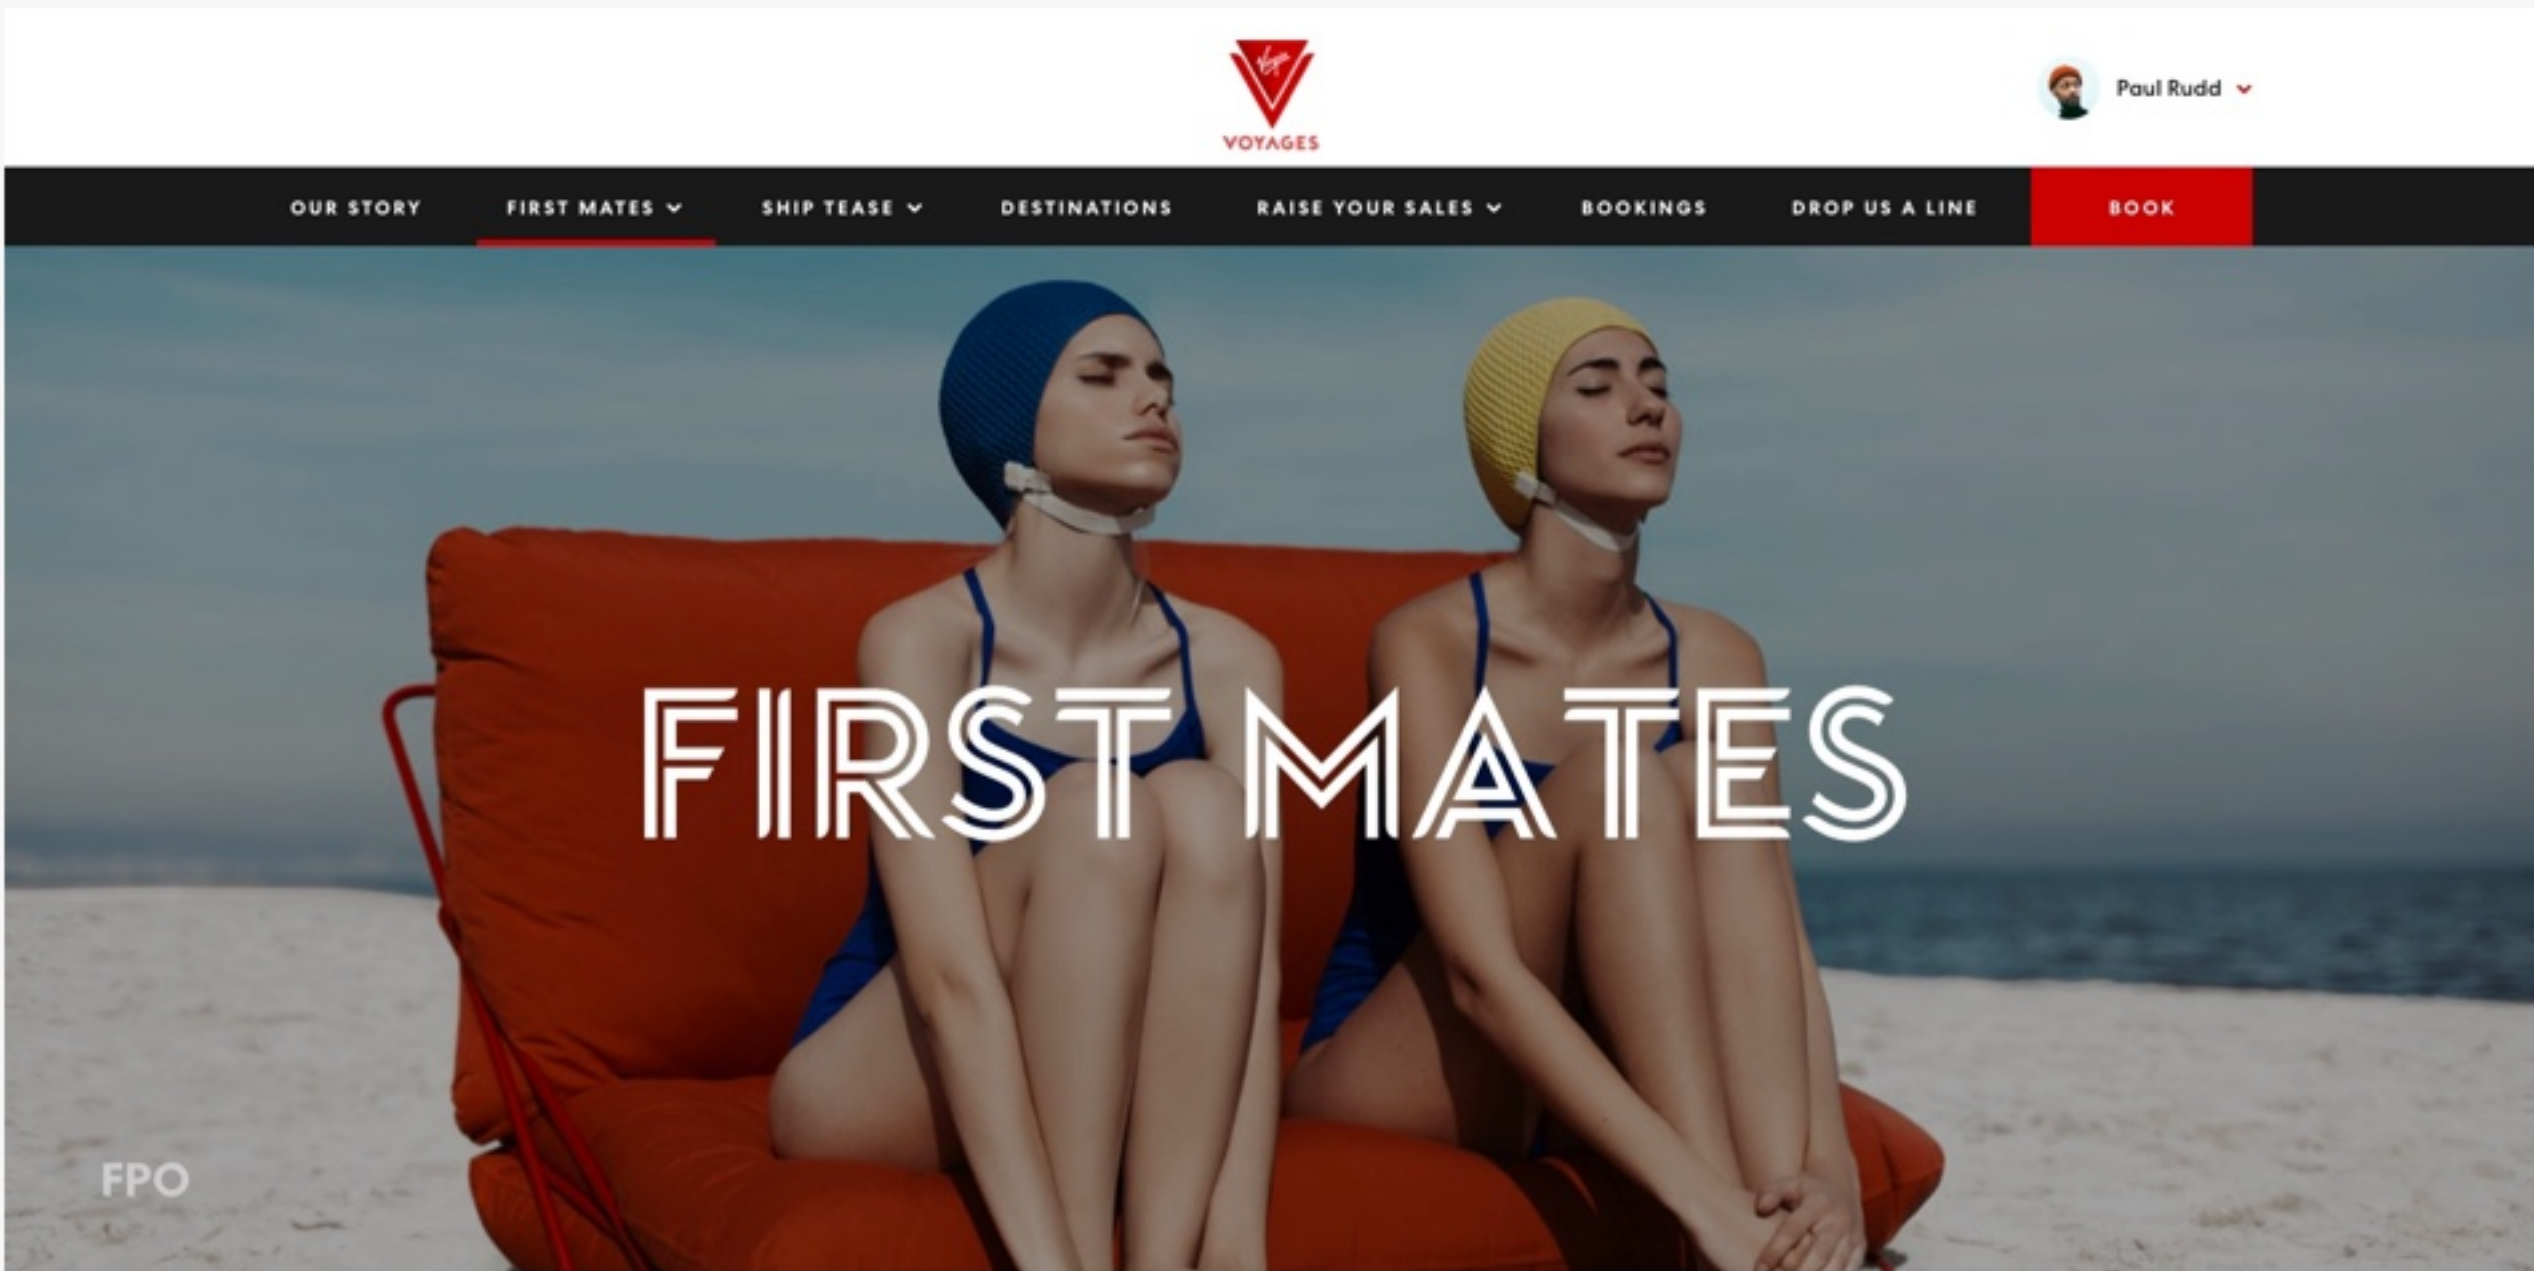

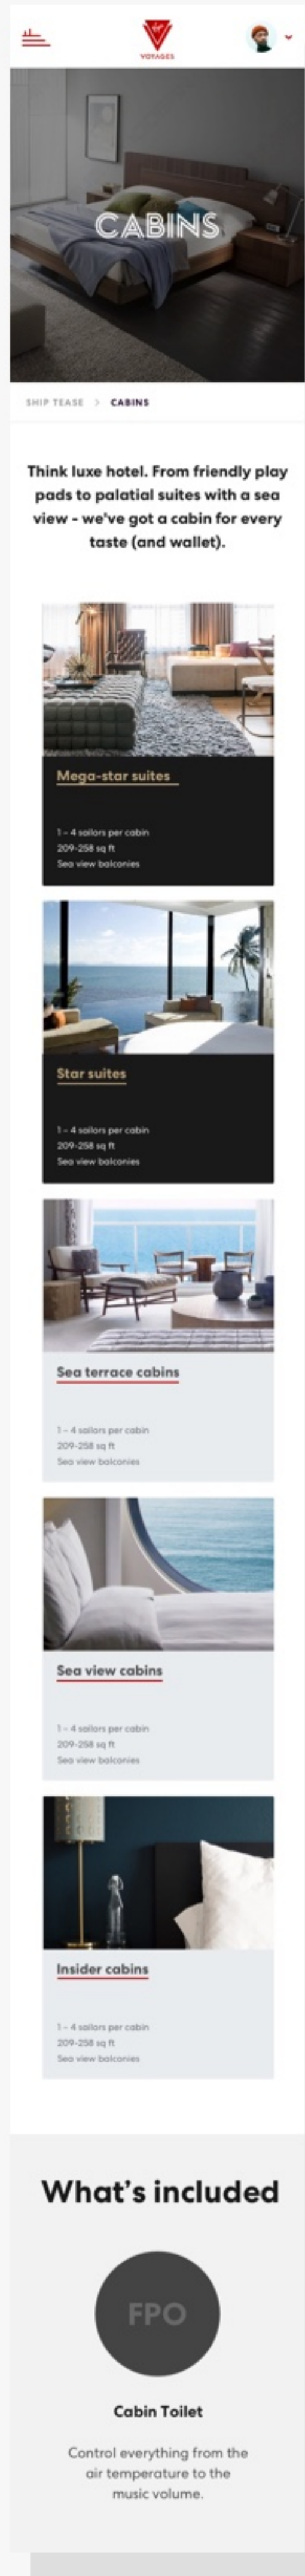

The modern romance of sailing

We want to capture the golden age of ocean voyages. As our sailors seek one-off and extraordinary life experiences, we aim to catch them off-guard...providing thoughts and emotions that transform.

The journey is the

We pick partners who want to share success. "A Captain's champion. Carefully chosen. Extremely loyal. The most trusted right hand."

A MESSAGE FOR YOU, FROM CAPTAIN RICHARD BRANSON

We're brilliant to do business with

We're so done with old partnership models.
We spoke to travel professionals and came up with a radical new plan for better ways to work (and earn) together.

Codility

Codility is a platform to help organisations quality check developers during the recruitment process. The brief was to redesign their promotional customer facing front end website. Codility has recently undergone an extensive rebranding exercise. The new website brings this new branding into life, with extensive use of animation to really invigorate the organisations content. I purely worked on the UI of this project from a UX handover, working closely with another 3 designers to specially reach tight deadlines over the Christmas period. A fantastic example dynamic use of an organisations abstract branding.

M_Use

Avery Dennison is a global materials science company that specialise in the design and manufacture of labelling for a huge range of consumer applications. Their brief was to create an inspirational/web based product for existing customers to browse new materials, seek inspiration and discover how creative labelling has been utilised in other projects. M_Use is a growing platform, with scope for expansion to nurture very valuable user engagement. I was the sole designer on this project and was closely involved during entire UX and subsequent UI process. The design is very spartan, almost brutalist, with very little distinction between the original wireframes and the final interface. An intreesting example of simplicity of function and content. Less is more.

About Us

Power Up

A project loosely based on a previous product I was involved in which is currently being tested by the National Health Service in the United Kingdom. Originally it was implemented to assist hospitals design and model realtime efficiencies in the general running of departments. Power-Up repurposed the health care product which crunched incredible volumes of hard core data and turned it into very sophisticated project management software, with expanded scope to run and control your entire business model. Initially it was aimed at design agencies, but has aspirations to be useful in any organisational context. Power Up was purely a desktop web based app, I was the sole designer for both the UX and UI design phases.
